Daily Rune by Hilary Ayer

Day 3 Perthro, the lot cup

Pethro is the unseen and the unknown. It relates to the undefinable, to the child in the womb, to what is becoming. When the shape closes, it becomes Berkano, runes of the goddesses. Perthro is numinous, trembling on the edge of the sacred. Rituals and discussions today may pluck at your heart and teach it a deeper music.

The runes are heathen symbols that are used in divination, talismantic, and chant magic. Hilary Ayer lives to talk about the runes. You may reach her through the Heathen Hospitality Hall.

Divination Readings Available from PantheaCon Presenters

Several of our presenters are offering divination readings in their preferred divination system. Come by the Vendor Coordinator Station, right by the main entrance to the Vendor Room in the Bayshore Ballroom to see who is available and to sign up for a reading!

Accessibility

There is wheelchair/scooter seating space available in every PantheaCon event. The seats immediately adjacent to those open spaces should be held for any able-bodied companion of those who need assistive devices.

Animals and PantheaCon

While the DoubleTree Hotel is a pet-friendly venue, PantheaCon allows only trained service animals to be present in Con events. Companion animals and comfort animals are not allowed. This includes but is not limited to, mammals, reptiles, amphibians, and birds.

Daily Tarot with ThalassaRaptor

Sunday Knight of Wands:

Move boldly and with grace. Focus your energies on what you want to take away and what you want to share from this experience. Remind yourself of what gives you strength. Practice integrity.

Be respectful:
Clean up your own
messes

Badge Ribbon Etiquette

Ask nicely, don't demand, and use your magic words ("please" and "thank you"). Don't badger people for a ribbon, or interrupt them to ask for one. Politely accept when you get the inevitable "No." Not every ribbon is meant to be shared widely; you can't collect them all.

PantheaCon attendees may NOT use the back hallways or service elevators of the hotel for any reason whatsoever.
