Daily Rune by Hilary Ayer

Monday Laguz, the Flow and the Leek

A friend from the Northern Climes talks about how one duty of the seneschal was to inform his overlord when the first leek rose from the ground. It's a sign of renewal, of spring reborn, of the inevitability of the return of life. Leeks are also a natural antibiotic, used in early medicines and spring soups which fight spring colds and winter scurvy.

The runes have reminded you to hear one another, to connect with your heritages, to defend your works and heritage. Now flow out through the land and the spirit lands. Nourish your covens and your kindreds and your stamping grounds. Flood out falsehood and make fertile what is fallow. Let the small creatures grow and the greening take place. In fall comes harvest. Let strength engender it.

Farewell to PantheaCon
Elhaz the Protector

What has been is strong in our hearts
Kenaz knowledge light and perhaps pain
What is becoming will come from truth acknowledged

Ingwaz, the growth of fertile and regal power
The force of what is to come will be born from both nature and the heart.

LOST & FOUND

If you have lost or found anything during your PantheaCon stay, please come by ConOps on the 2nd Floor by 3 p.m. today to claim or turn in items. After 3 p.m., the Lost and Found will be moving to the Ancient Ways store in Oakland, which is currently renovating and will reopen in March.

Calling All Mechanics!

One of our community members is having problems with her car. If you have mechanical know-how and the ability to look at it before the end of the Con, please text Susala at 510-703-4096.

Please silence your cell phone when going into any PantheaCon event, and refrain from texting.

Limit your smoking to outside of the hotel. There are no areas inside the hotel that allow smoking, including open air areas within the hotel.

Respect Privacy!
PantheaCon has a NO PHOTOGRAPHY and NO VIDEO RECORDINGS policy.
